

THINK HE IS KEMP

Beckley, W. Va., Police Have Arrested a Suspect.

RESEMBLES MISSING CLERK

State's Attorney Telegraphs Local Police and Suspect is Held Pending Arrival of Sgt. Carter, Who Left Washington Last Night for the West Virginia Town.

According to advices received at police headquarters, a man has been arrested at Beckley, Raleigh County, W. Va., whom the authorities there believe is James Arthur Kemp, missing clerk and property clerk of the police department, who disappeared from this city several months ago leaving his accounts short by several thousands of dollars.

Last evening a long-distance telephone message was received by the police officials from State's Attorney A. A. Lilly, of West Virginia, telling of the arrest. The suspect was placed in custody at Beckley yesterday afternoon by Constable Smith, acting on directions from Attorney Lilly, who was in that town on the occasion of the fall session of the county courts.

He Resembles Kemp.

Attorney Lilly says the man under arrest there closely resembles the photograph of Kemp, which was sent broadcast throughout the country on the many thousand circulars offering a reward for his apprehension. According to the reports received last night, the man under arrest in the West Virginia town had been engaged as a bookkeeper in one of the larger business houses there, and is known to be an expert stenographer. A short time after Attorney Lilly recognized the man and had noticed the great similarity to the picture of Kemp which he had at hand, the suspect suddenly got together his belongings and left the place, apparently aware he was being watched. Constable Smith was directed to follow him, and after a ride of twenty-five miles located him in a small village. He was promptly placed under arrest, and under the escort of the constable was taken back to Beckley. The fact that the man is known to be a bookkeeper and stenographer, and because of the sudden flight from the town, leads the local authorities to believe they have perhaps succeeded in locating the missing clerk.

Second Message Comes.

About 9 o'clock last night a second message was received by Capt. Boardman from State's Attorney Lilly, as the result of which Sgt. Carter, one of the oldest members of the headquarters' detective force, who, like all the members of that command, is well acquainted with Kemp, was directed to start immediately for the West Virginia town, to have a look at the man now under arrest. Detective Carter was one of the many persons about the city victimized by Kemp's notes.

All Americans

Admire Heroism,

And when the hero is in their midst they want to know it.

THE WASHINGTON HERALD to-morrow will tell you all about a hero whose home is in Washington, but whose remarkable life has led him to play a hero's part over three-quarters of the globe. One instance alone, in which he and 119 comrades cut their way through an army and won an empire for their mother country, would make his life worth reading. Can you afford to miss it?

Next Saturday two branches of the royal house of Bourbon, members of which occupy many of the thrones of Europe or claim heritage to many more, will be joined by the marriage of their representatives. You want to know who they are and what their relation to the other royal lines may be.

The duck-shooting season opened on the first day of November. If you enjoy a day with your gun on the marshes, it will be worth your while to read what an experienced hunter has to say about the wary mallard and his haunts.

The world was shocked only recently by the story of the massacre of a heroic band of American soldiers in the Philippines. But do you know the details of that red day at Balangiga, as an eyewitness can describe it?

Of course you are reading that absorbing story by a past master of the art of romantic fiction—"The Iron Lord," by S. R. Crockett.

THE WASHINGTON HERALD to-morrow will contain all these things, and even then the list of its attractions is not half told. Probably you read Washington's best newspaper every Sunday and every other day. Most Washingtonians and many other people do. If you're not among them, to-morrow will be a good time to begin.

THE WASHINGTON HERALD's Sunday edition sells for three cents. Do you know of any other Washington Sunday newspaper that does?

CALLS IT A ROUT MERIT IS REWARDED

Miss Phoebe Couzens Analyzes Delaware Election.

Three Diplomats Receive Promotion in Service.

HARD BLOW TO PROHIBITION

Fight Demonstrates, She Says, that the Only Way the Sale of Liquor and Saloons Can Be Stopped Is to Find a Suitable Substitute by Way of Poor Men's Clubs.

D. J. HILL GETS GERMAN POST

Present Minister to Netherlands and Former Assistant Secretary of State Receives Ambassador's Billet.

That the fanaticism displayed by the women and children in the recent Delaware fight for prohibition is enough to keep all thinking men from giving the feminine half of the world equal suffrage, is the belief of Miss Phoebe Couzens, who took an interest in the election and who was in Wilmington during the campaign.

"Practically the entire population of the State," said Miss Couzens last night, upon her return from Wilmington, "will not have prohibition. Two counties, Kent and Sussex, voted 'dry,' but these comprise but something more than one-fifth of the entire population of the commonwealth.

"I am firmly convinced that had the election in Wilmington gone for the 'drys' there would have been a bloody riot. Never was a more confederate measure proposed than the one on which the vote was taken. It provided that immediately upon the announcement of the election, should it go against the saloons, they should be closed up without even an hour's notice.

Led by Churchmen.

"The fight was led by the churchmen and the ministers, and I contend, as I long have, that they have no business trying to mix the affairs of the State with those of the church. The election was a good example of the fact that there is no chance in legislating the passions from the human breast.

"I never saw a hotter fight. All day Sunday the people surged up and down the streets, because there were no theaters or other places for them to attend. On Monday night, the preachers called the women and children out, and when they should have all been in bed, they spent half the night praying and singing. On election morning they went up and down the streets with transparencies bearing all kinds of alliterative legends, and the American flag, as though that flag did not belong as much to the men they were trying to legislate out of business.

"I am glad to see that the other elections, where the matter was an issue, resulted in a rout of the prohibitionists in almost all places. It shows that sane men will not permit trifling with their personal liberties.

Led Like Sheep.

"In this fight, the women and children, most of them not knowing what it was all about, were led like sheep, on the ground that the mere sale of liquor makes a vile nation. As I pointed out in my lecture here, Germany is the one beer-drinking country in the world, and if a German dealer sells liquor to a man who has had enough, thereby abusing instead of using it, the license is taken away from him. What is the result? At the St. Louis world's fair, the German entries captured 1,600 of the 2,000 medals offered for all kinds of work.

"The fight in Wilmington shows that the wave that is sweeping over the rural South is not finding sympathy through the thickly populated districts in the North, and the only way the sale of liquor and saloons will ever be stopped is to find a suitable substitute by way of poor men's clubs."

Lecture at the Shoreham.

"Recent progress in historical work" will be the subject of a lecture and discussion by Colyer Meriwether, Ph. D., and the members of the Columbia Historical Society, at the first meeting of the season of 1907-1908, held by that organization Monday evening at 8 o'clock, in the banquet hall of the Shoreham. The public is invited.

LABOR MAKES PLANS

Executive Council Discusses Norfolk Meeting.

GOMPERS TO SPRING SURPRISE

National President Maintains Secrecy Regarding Proposed Revolution—Questions of Labor Unionism Will Be Decided, and Congressional Legislation Will Be Invoked.

Preliminary to leaving this city for Jamestown, where the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor is to be held next week, the executive council of that organization will hold a special meeting at American Federation of Labor headquarters, in Typographical Temple, to-day.

A second similar meeting will be held Sunday at the convention hall in the exposition grounds. The entire council, President Gompers, Secretary Morrison, and all the other officers of the Federation, will leave this city to-night on the boat for Norfolk.

They will be accompanied by a large number of delegates to the convention, a great many of whom are already in this city. Many others will arrive here early this morning, and a second delegation will leave on the Sunday night boat, to be in time for the convention opening on Monday morning.

Many matters of vast importance, not only to those in the labor movement, but to the country at large, will be brought up for consideration and disposition at the coming convention, and, according to the testimony of members of the executive council, it will be the most momentous session held for the past seven years.

It is definitely known, that President Gompers is prepared to spring one of the biggest sensations in years, during the opening days of the convention, and it is for this and other reasons, that the special meetings of the executive council will be held. Absolute secrecy has been maintained regarding the subject of the promised sensation, but it is believed to bear on American industries, an alleged labor union-busting combination.

Questions of Importance.

Some of the matters of the greatest importance are of a local character. These include the suit of the Buck Store and Range Company against the Federation, which will come up in the local courts at the present session; the plans of the Federation and President Gompers for the fighting of labor's battles in Congress, and the bringing of the gigantic lobby during the close of the session, and also matters pertaining to the local strike situation, which will be made a test case, so to speak, of the Federation. The telegraphers' strike also will be brought up, and steps taken to preserve and build the union, to make a better fight should the occasion demand in the near future.

Joseph F. Valentine, of Cleveland, Ohio, a member of the executive council and president of the International Iron Molders' Union, which is involved in the Buck Store Company suit, was in conference with President Gompers yesterday. In referring to the suit, he said he thought the "Parryties" and the rest of the combination were "barking up the wrong tree, and I think before the show down, they will see their folly."

Many other prominent leaders also held conferences yesterday, including Thomas Ryan, vice president of the United Mine Workers, who controls the wage scale in the Western soft coal regions, and who represents and will act as alternate for President Mitchell, who is ill; President James O'Connell, of the International Association of Machinists; Daniel J. Keefe, of Detroit, member of the executive council, and president of the International Longshoremen's Union; President James M. Lynch, of the International Typographical Union; and O. Wolcott, international president of the photo-engravers.

Plans for Legislation.

W. F. Brennan, of Pittsburgh, representative of the building trades there; Organized Griffen, of Baltimore, and business agent of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters of Baltimore, also held conferences with President Gompers, and with the local building trades council strike committee.

These conferences were also important, and among the matters discussed was the gigantic demonstration and series of open meetings to be held in Convention Hall, which, according to the plans, will be participated in by all the national and international officers and delegates to the convention. These are the most representative men in the labor movement, and if the convention approves the move, the demonstration will be the most unique ever made by organized labor.

None of these, however, will overshadow the big part organized labor, through the American Federation of Labor, plans to take in National politics and labor legislation in Congress. It is probable that the convention will outline the policy to be followed in the election of President and Congressmen, and the Congressmen, against whom the fight will be made, will probably be named, as well as labor's candidates in their districts. Several representatives, union members, were elected by organized labor a year ago, and these will head the legislative fight, and it is planned to augment this strength.

The most important issue of all is, however, whether or not organized labor will favor, or disfavor, President Roosevelt and his policies. Although from his local standpoint it looks as though his candidate will be looked on with disfavor, the opposite view is taken by the delegates from many other sections. The fight will center around Secretary Taft, as he is known to labor as the "father of the injunction."
